

Tentative Program and List of Participants

Wednesday, May 21, 2014, afternoon:

Allan Collins (Prof. emeritus Northwestern University, USA)

A History of Mass Collaboration

Alvin Goldman (Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, USA)

Social and Systemic Epistemology

Ulrike Cress (Knowledge Media Research Center, Tübingen, Germany)

Mass Collaboration as Co-Evolution between Cognitive and Social systems

Aileen Oeberst (Knowledge Media Research Center, Tübingen, Germany)

Individual vs. Collaborative Information Processing: The Case of Biases in Wikipedia.

Thursday, May 22, 2014, morning:

Gerhard Fischer (University of Colorado, USA)

Cultures of Participation

Wai-Tat Fu (University of Illinois, USA)

From Distributed Cognition to Collective Intelligence

Joachim Kimmerle (Knowledge Media Research Center, Tübingen, Germany)

Collective knowledge in tagging environments

Iassen Halatchliyski (Knowledge Media Research Center, Tübingen, Germany)

SNA in Wikipedia

Peter Gerjets (Knowledge Media Research Center, Tübingen, Germany)

Research at KMRC

Thursday, May 22, 2014, afternoon:

Ben Shapiro (Tufts University, USA)

Participatory Discovery Networks: The Future of Online Learning

Stephen Downes (National Research Council, Canada)

Collaboration and Cooperation

Iryna Gurevych (Technische Universität Darmstadt, Germany)

Language Technology for Mass Collaboration in Education

Thomas Herrmann (University of Bochum, Germany)

Mass-Collaboration as a Basis of Procedures for E-Participation

Darren Gergle (Northwestern University, USA)

Understanding and Bridging the Wikipedia Language Gap

Paolo Massa (Scientific and Technological Research Centre, Trento, Italy)

A Tool for Analyzing Language Points of View in Wikipedia

Friday, May 23, 2014, morning:

Discussion (small groups, plenum)

Planning joint publication